In early winter, the view changes from green to a soft brown and golden tone. You'll pass quiet fields, leafless trees, and small Kashmiri villages getting ready for the colder months. In the afternoon, take a calm walk along the Lidder River. The air feels crisp, the river flows clear and steady, and the wooden bridges and rocky banks give the place a clean, quiet beauty. You might see locals going about their day. As the sun sets, the hills around Pahalgam take on gentle shades of orange and pink, giving the whole valley a warm glow despite the chill. After enjoying the evening, head back to your hotel for a warm dinner and a restful night.
